Singing Icon Bob Goulet Dies in Bizarre Kidnapping Gambit
Obsessed Steve & Eydie Fan Kills Self and "Camelot" Star in Blazing Car Crack-up

DOWNSVILLE, NY—Entertainer Robert Goulet was killed in the dramatic finale to a diabolical plot concocted by a fan of the lounge singer, known as the Lounge-O-Leer, who was found in his car on a highway near Goulet's mansion last night.

Two.

That's a magic number.

Greatness has always come in twos. Lucy and Desi, Wheeler and Woolsey, Sacco and Vanzetti, Dolly Parton.

The aluminum disc you now clutch in your hands is the result of a love's labor from two devoted eternally white-suited Men of Love, The Lounge-O-Leers. Ricky & Hot Rod. They've dedicated their lives to making a happy world happier with their ambiently relaxed swinging sound. There's no doubt Ferrante & Teicher would have several nice words to say about them, if only they were still talking to me (silly restraining order). No matter. I have a several nice words, but I'm already running out of space. These CD's are so darn small.

The Lounge-O-Leers sure know how to wrap their Casios around a tune. In fact, Jerry Mathers, er, Cotton Mather, er MARSHALL MATHER (AKA Eminem) was doomed to endure a sea of indifference until Ricky and Hot Rod tirelessly promoted his music, via their superb interpretive skills. It still galls us all that he never thanked them when he picked up his Grammy. Even Madonna can be counted among their legions of fans. When I brought up the topic of Ricky and Hot Rod in an in-depth interview, the Material Girl went so far as to say "Get away from my car, you *8^#@!" Now that's love.

Of course, I'm a well-known music journalist, so I count The Lounge-O-Leers among my closest compadres (I'm often introduced at AA meetings as "The Third Lounge-O-Leer."). You? You're not that lucky. But this CD can be next best thing. So zip up your smoking jacket, pour a dry one, insert the CD label-side up, and soon you'll hear yourself exclaim, "Wow It's the Groovy Sounds of the Lounge-O-Leers Two" too.
